Editorial Review

From Library Journal

Magic, castles, and romance come together with enchanting results in this charming collection of four novellas by some of Jove's more notable writers. Nora Roberts leads off with "Spellbound," a fast-paced story of spells and consequences; Jill Gregory provides a gothic touch and a dash of evil in her darker "Castle Doom"; Ruth Ryan Langan adds treachery and a wonderfully romantic spirit, in "Falcon's Lair"; and Marianne Willman's fairytale-like "Dragonspell" nicely completes the quartet. This well-focused collection is a good addition to the late winter romance market and readers who like their romance on the magical side will find it enjoyable reading.
